SEPARATION OF THE VANDERBILTS IS NOT DENIED BY HUSBAND

Not Necessary for Wife to Consult Him About Closing of Newport Home and Departure for Tuxedo, Alfred G. Declares.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, head of the Cornelius Vanderbilt branch of the family, whose wife is reported to have left him, was seen by an Evening World reporter today at the Knickerbocker Club, where he had spent the night. It was nearly noon when a brougham which he had ordered from his stables at No. 210 West Fifty-eighth street called at the club for him.

"Do you care to say," Mr. Vanderbilt was asked, "if it is true, as reported, that you and Mrs. Vanderbilt have agreed to separate and live apart?"

"I do not care to say," he replied.

"Will you deny that the separation is true?"

"No, I will not deny it."

"Will you state whether or not papers have been served upon you in a suit for divorce instituted by your wife?"

"I would admit it if it were true, but it is not true."

"Can you explain why Mrs. Vanderbilt packed up her effects at Oakland Farm, your home at Newport, and moved to her brother's home at Tuxedo?"

"I would gladly explain that matter to you if I could. Mrs. Vanderbilt has a perfect right to send her effects to Tuxedo. I expect she intends to spend the summer there."

"Were you consulted about her move?"

"That was not necessary."

"Is it true that you contemplate an early departure for England to establish a branch between London and Brighton?"

"I shall sail for England on Saturday."

Mr. Vanderbilt drove from the Knickerbocker Club to his office at No. 25 Fifth avenue. From there he drove to the Grand Central station, where he attended to a lot of business connected with the New York Central Railroad. He is busily engaged in arranging his affairs to allow him to make a long stay in England.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's brother, to whose home in Tuxedo she has removed seven carloads of effects from Oakland Farm at Newport, is Amos Tuck French, President of the Manhattan Trust Company at No. 50 Wall street. He has town apartments in the Stratford House at No. 111 East Thirty-second street, and breakfasted today at 9 o'clock at the Knickerbocker Club. Had he remained at the club a matter of two hours he would have met his brother-in-law, but he is an energetic business man and had affairs demanding his attention downtown.

Separation Expected.

Mr. French was seen at his office as he was about to start for a directors' meeting. He was asked if he cared to De Chaunles Has Put Off Settling for Seven Years, Cavanagh Alleges.

Due de Chaunles, who recently married Miss Theodora Shonts in New York, and sailed away to honeymoon abroad, was today made the defendant in a suit for a $2,000 tailor bill. The complaint and an application to have the service of a summons set aside came up before Judge Conlin, in the City Court.

The action was brought by James P. Hannigan, assignee for James Cavanagh, the London tailor. The latter alleges that the Due de Chaunles ran up the bill in 1901 and made various promises to pay.

The action was brought by James P. Hannigan, assignee for James Cavanagh, the London tailor. The latter alleges that the Due de Chaunles ran up the bill in 1901 and made various promises to pay.

It is alleged that the Due de Chaunles was served with the papers in the case a day before he sailed away, but in the answer it is set forth that the process server mistook the Baron Louis de Candia for the defendant and served the summons on the wrong man.

The attorney for the plaintiff, in answer to the Due de Chaunles, almost always the shorter and uglier word. He declares the papers were served on the Due de Chaunles and not on the Baron de Candia.

The original bill was for $1,345, but the interest swells the amount to $2,000. Gates Hamburger, attorney for the plaintiff, says that Mayer H. Touster served the papers, and the process server in an affidavit swears that the Due de Chaunles was pointed out to him by the Shonts chauffeur.

Decision was reserved on the application to set aside the service.

CORTEYOU COMES HERE TO STAY UNTIL SATURDAY.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou left Washington today for New York, expecting to remain away until Saturday.

Common Sense!

A lake may be long and deep, but it will not be much frequented by anglers if the fish it contains are few.

And so it is with advertising mediums.

Some believe The World prints more separate advertisements every week, month and year than any other newspaper on earth because it has a greater circulation in New York City than ANY TWO other morning newspapers combined.

BE THIS AS IT MAY, IT IS A FACT THAT THOUSANDS OF NEW YORKERS BUY THE MORNING WORLD PRIMARILY FOR THE GREAT VARIETY OF ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES IT PRESENTS.

AND THAT'S ONE REASON WHY WORLD ADS. BRING SUCH EXCELLENT RESULTS.

MINISTERS JOIN IN FIGHT ON BILL FOR LOCAL OPTION

One Tells Assemblymen the Gray Measure Really Means City Coercion.

WOULD DO INJUSTICE.

Declares the Catholics, Lutherans, Episcopalians and Hebrews Oppose Measure.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, March 25.—At the hearing before the Assembly Excise Committee this afternoon on the Gray local option bill for cities, ministers joined with the real estate interests, the brewers and other organizations in opposing the measure. The principal speakers were William Forster, of New York City, representing the brewery interests of the State, Rev. William A. Wasson, pastor of Grace Episcopal Church, Riverhead, L. I., and Rev. Edmund Banks Smith, Chaplain at Governor's Island New York harbor. The appearance of the clergymen in opposition to the local option bill was a surprise to the anti-saloon league.

Rev. Mr. Wasson made a vigorous argument against the Gray bill, commenting on the anti-saloon league in this fashion:

"Now when these people say they represent the church, they say what is not true. Just how much of the church membership they do represent I cannot tell, but this I do know, and they know, that they do not represent the Catholic Church, nor the Episcopal Church, nor the Lutheran Church, nor the Jewish Church. Their movement has not made the slightest impression on one of these great religious bodies. These churches are practically unanimous in their opposition to the platform and methods of the Anti-Saloon League."

"The avowed object of their local option scheme is to give the people of each local community the power to protect themselves against the alleged nuisance of the liquor traffic, to drive its traffic out of their immediate vicinity."

"The idea is not that the people of one community should have the power to drive this business out of some other community. Each local unit may protect only its own members. Now, if you give the people of Manhattan and the Bronx the power to make the borough of Queens and Richmond dry, where does the option come in for the people living in the latter sections of the city? This bill is not a local option bill. It is a city coercion bill."

Rev. Edmund Banks Smith referred to the question of the canten and temperance in the United States Army and the effect of the abolition of the canten.

FINDS WAIF ON STAIR OF EAST SIDE TENEMENT.

Woman Would Have Claimed It Had the Foundling Been a Boy, but She Wasn't.

Max Kaufman, of No. 55 Ludlow street, was climbing the stairs at No. 73 Essex street when he found a baby lying on the steps. He summoned the women of the house. One woman, who refused to give her name, insisted that the child be turned over to her, Kaufman refused.

Policeman Friedlander, of the Eldridge street station, was summoned. Against the loud protestations of the woman the child was taken to the station-house. Lieut. Ormsby told the woman that she could claim the child at Bellevue.

"I want the baby, but—but—" said the woman.

"After what?" asked the lieutenant.

"Maybe it ain't a boy," said the woman.

"It's a girl," said the lieutenant.

With a gasp of dismay the woman ran from the station-house crying, "No, no, I don't want it."

Three months old and dressed in a plain white dress, was taken to Bellevue. There was nothing to lead to identification.

WORKMAN SCALDED.

His Comrades Escape Injury When Boiler Explodes.

One workman was terribly scalded and several others barely escaped similar injury today when a boiler exploded in the cellar of No. 23 Trinity place.

The injured man, who was taken to Hudson Street Hospital, is Joseph Harschoff, of No. 98 Second avenue.

After they had got over their fright the workmen rushed to where their comrade lay and pulled him out of the cloud of hissing steam.
